CAN ENGLISHMEN RUN RAILWAYS?

Lord Claud.

Mr. H. W. Thornton.

Amazement is expressed at Lord C. Hamilton's statement about the dearth of first-class ability among the younger men in this country in announcing the appointment of Mr. Thornton, an American, as general manager of the Great Eastern Railway.

HOW I FOUND MAN OF ALL TALENTS.

CRINOLINES TO BE WORN IN SUMMER.

Lord Claud Hamilton Tells
How America Supplied
Brains to Britain.

"A MAN OF IRON."

Youth of England "Tied by Red Tape" and Old Methods.

"He is a strong man; a man of iron."
This was the emphatic tribute paid by Lord Claud Hamilton last night to Mr. Henry W. Thornton, an American, who has just been appointed general manager of the Great Eastern Railway, because, according to Lord Claud Hamilton, there is a dearth in England of young men having the first-class qualities required for such a post.

Strong criticism has followed his assertion as chairman of the Great Eastern Railway that he "had been looking through England for some years without success to find a young Englishman capable of filling the post of general manager."
How America supplied the man required was related by Lord Claud Hamilton in a special interview granted to The Daily Mirror last night, when he also replied to his critics.

MAN OF ALL THE QUALITIES.

"My duty and that of my board," he said, "consisted in obtaining the services of a man for the post of general manager of our railway who, in my opinion, possessed all the technical knowledge essential to such an office."

"I have not the least doubt that we have made a wise choice and that it will soon be justified by Mr. Thornton's work when once he is installed in office."

"He is a strong man—a man of iron. He has not yet reached the prime of life—he is but forty-one, and I consider that a man in the prime of his life at forty-five—and he will not lack the initiative of the modern young man for intellect and technical knowledge."

Speaking of his search for capable men in England, Lord Claud Hamilton said—

"So far as our researches went, we could not find anyone in England at the present moment who really possessed the combination we require."

Having regard, therefore, to our duty to our shareholders—our first duty—we considered it desirable to inquire whether such a man, still in the prime of life and answering all our requirements, was to be found elsewhere."

"We succeeded in finding him in America, and accordingly we appointed him."
The system of administration on American railways undoubtedly gives young men of ability to the front far sooner than is the case here, and we considered it essential in the peculiar circumstances of the Great Eastern Railway, that we should obtain the services of a young and active man of greater than the usual class of men in similar appointments in Great Britain."

"TIED WITH RED TAPE."

"There is no doubt about it," added Lord Claud Hamilton, "that here in England young men are really tied down with red tape and obsolete rule-of-thumb methods."

"Please, be clear on the point, that I am criticising neither the men nor the management, but the system of administration which does not allow me to hear of any able men that we may have in our service."

"My objection to this present system is, further, that it does not enable men who have not yet reached the prime of life to get the highest positions."

"Most of our general managers are appointed at an age when the physical strain is too great for them."

"It is quite possible that two or three years ago we could have had the men we wanted, but vacancies have occurred on other railways and the services of the most competent have been secured by them."

DO RIGHT MEN GET A CHANCE?

Why is it that so few young men employed by British railway companies ever succeed in rising to the highest responsible positions?

Do they ever get a chance?

Is the whole system of British railway management hopelessly antiquated and out of date?

These are some of the questions being asked just now not only by British railway employees, but also by the travelling public.

An interesting view on the subject was given to The Daily Mirror by the editor of the Railway News. He said—

"Bright young men employed in railway offices have hitherto had little chance of rising to big, responsible posts."

"The reason is that the men do not get an opportunity of studying all branches of railway organisation, and, as Lord Claud Hamilton says, are kept in 'water-tight compartments.'"

"Latterly, however, several British railway companies have broken away from this system, and promising young men are given every opportunity of qualifying as future general managers."

A prominent London railway official, who has had several years' experience on American railroads, seen by The Daily Mirror, severely criticised the methods of the majority of British companies.

"Some railways in this country," he said, "are twenty years or more behind the times."

"They stick to old, slow-going methods, and anything new is immediately tabooed by indignant boards of directors."

Trouser Skirts to Vie with Hobbled
Victorian Mode.

WHAT PARIS WILL SEE.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

PARIS, Feb. 15.—Trouser skirts and crinolines are among the feminine fashions for the coming summer, while ostrich feathers, furniture brocade and string braid, commonly used for halters, are being requisitioned for trimmings.

With the opening of the flat racing season at Auteuil the leading Paris dressmakers are at last exhibiting the new feminine fashions.

The type cut into again makes its bow to the public. M. Paul Poiret, the dressmaker, shows in his collection of summer fashions a great number of trouser skirts in afternoon and evening dresses, as well as for tailor-made costumes.

Side by side with these is the crinoline dress—not the crinoline of the time of Queen Victoria, but a narrow, abbreviated affair which cannot by any means be called beautiful.

The 1914 crinoline is very narrow round the feet and is unlined. Then comes a light and wider upper skirt, which is wired, takes this another and yet another is superimposed.

The skirts are really shaped frills with a wired hem.

It has been said that the new summer gowns would be more transparent than ever. This is not true. There will be no attempt at transparency. Where yesterday there was transparency, to-day there is unabashed bareness.

OSTRICH FEATHER STRANDS.

Arms are bare and there is no attempt at sleeves. A number of evening gowns have no covering whatever under the arm till half way down the waist.

Shoulders, too, are bare and the dress is kept up by a band of roses half way round the neck and fastened in front like the band of a servant's apron.

In violent contrast to this is what is called the "fussy" dress. The front of the dress is soft and clinging and is brought to the back in the bustle style, while over the hips are puffs and panniers. There is also a wide collar with deep points stiffly starched.

The skirt, if anything, is narrower than ever, and walking will once more become a difficult task, because the "slit" has gone.

Ostrich feather trimmings are much in favour.

I have not seen a single skirt or bodice that is without a band of ostrich feather on the hem.

In some cases it is worn in strands curled over the back so as to make a Medici collar, and in others it is wound round blue and pink artificial flowers.

Coats are sleeveless and wider. They are becoming more and more like the old stage coachman's round and superimposed cape. But women have made it longer, and in some cases there are five capes, one above the other.

Not only is furniture brocade used for evening dresses and furniture braid for trimmings, but the string braid commonly used for halters is also being requisitioned.

Side by side with horses' harness are also being used in original colours—blue, dirty white and pink.

PRINCE ILL WITH MUMPS

Kaiser's Heir Victim of Painful Disease
Usually Associated with Childhood.

The German Crown Prince, says a yesterday's Berlin newspaper, is with mumps.

As the Kaiser's heir is in his thirty-second year, many people will no doubt feel surprised that he is suffering from what is generally regarded as an infantile disease. As a matter of fact, however, adults are often attacked with the disease.

Indeed, occasionally an epidemic of mumps occurs in a large business office. It was so prevalent in the City just before Christmas that a large number of business men took out policies at Lloyd's to insure themselves against an attack.

"Mumps is a contagious inflammation of the glands," a doctor told The Daily Mirror last night.

"It begins with pain and then swelling behind the jaw, close to the ear. Usually the disease is without danger, but it is very painful and unpleasant."

NEW RULER AMONG THE RATS.

PARIS, Feb. 14.—The correspondent of the Petit Journal, telegraphing from Durazzo, gives a description of the konak, or palace, where Prince William of Wied (the new ruler of Albania) will reside.

He will have two studies, a saloon for the reception of guests, an antechamber, and a hall, at the entrance of which are situated rooms for the guard. The Princess and the ladies of the Court will be resident on the second floor.

The correspondent declares that the walls of the kitchen are black, and that the konak is full of rats and mice, while snakes sometimes make their appearance. Burning incense proved ineffective for driving out the rats.—Central News.

STATE TREASURER'S SUICIDE.

BUFFALO, Feb. 15.—Mr. John J. Kennedy, treasurer of New York State, has committed suicide by cutting his throat.

He was under subpoena to give evidence at the State barge canal investigation in connection with charges of graft to be held to-morrow.—Reuter.

WAVES 50 FT. HIGH. Sea Embankment Shattered in Great Storm—Floods Stop Railway Traffic.

Furious gales swept many parts of the kingdom during the week-end, leaving a sad trail of havoc.

Great damage was done yesterday at Swansea, where tremendous waves broke up the sea embankment for a distance of 200 yards. So great was the force of the sea that waves striking the stonework rose 70 ft. into the air, scooping tons of embankment material away.

Heavy gales also swept South Wales, and in Merionethshire floods washed out the ballast of a Cambrian railway embankment, stopping traffic.

In the English Channel a large number of vessels took shelter in the Solent off Yarmouth, and at Dover. Damage was done to the protective works of the Isle of Wight.

The Dutch steamer Dorothea Marabell, from Rotterdam, has gone ashore at Chesil Beach (Dorset). She is lying broadside on to the waves and, it is feared, will become a total wreck. Her crew of twenty-two were saved.

A fierce south-westerly gale raged over the Clyde. The sea ran so high during the forenoon that steamers could not venture to call at Helensburgh Pier.

London also was swept by heavy wind and rain early yesterday, but the temperature in the sun later rose as high as 75 deg.

In America, weather of exceptional severity has been experienced. A terrific snow blizzard swept down upon New York, leaving snow 14 in. deep.

Along the coast the weather was terrible. The Oceanic, which arrived three days late, was coated with ice.

GREAT GALE SWEEPS ST. KILDA.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

ST. KILDA, Feb. 14 (by wireless).—The worst storm which we have experienced at this lone island for three years swept over us last night and early this morning.

The inner half of the bay was a mass of boiling, hissing white foam, while enormous waves were crashing over the concrete pier.

The space between the pier and the cliffs presented a curious sight. It was covered with huge boulders every few feet, some of which had fallen from overhanging rocks.

MAN WITH FROZEN FEET.

£5 Bequest in Major's Will to a London
Crossing Sweeper.

£5 to William Smith, crossing sweeper with frozen feet at the Portman Square crossing.

This is one of the bequests in the will of Major George Horatio Brand, of Old Quebec-street, Portman-square, and late of the Royal Fusiliers, who died aged ninety-one years, and whose estate is valued at £49,208 gross.

William Smith, "the crossing-sweeper with the frozen feet," is quite a character in the Portman-square district, and for many years past he has been a resident "of the square at the Orchard-street corner."

When not sweeping the crossing there he spends the day sitting at this corner, acknowledging the kindly words of greeting from the many well-known people who live in and about Portman-square.

Smith is an old soldier, and proudly wears the clasps which indicate that he has served through several campaigns.

He is one of the comparatively few crossing-sweepers who may still be seen in odd corners of London.

Motor-omnibuses, taxicabs and the hustle of modern street traffic generally have made their occupation too dangerous.

DUEL TO "WIPE ONE OF US OUT."

PARIS, Feb. 14.—M. Jules Védérines, who returned to Paris from Egypt yesterday, says he will immediately send his seconds to M. Quinton, the president of the French Aerial League.

Last month, it will be remembered, M. Quinton telegraphed to M. Védérines at Cairo advising him either to apologise to or to fight M. Roux, the passenger in M. Daucourt's unsuccessful Paris-Cairo flight, whose ears he is said to have boxed.

M. Védérines said he wanted his duel with M. Quinton to be fought at ten paces with service revolvers. When it was pointed out to him that no second world war conditions, he said,

"One of us must be wiped out."—Reuter.

SHOT DEAD ON CRUISER.

For God's sake, lift me up.

These were the last words spoken by Nicholas John Henderson, thirty, a ship's steward's assistant on the cruiser Cressy, whose death from a mysterious pistol shot is being investigated at an inquest at the Royal Naval Hospital, Chatham, on Saturday the inquiry was adjourned.

Henderson completed his service in the Navy on Saturday, and was found by Jeffery Bodkin, able seaman, lying on the floor in the ship's steward's office. It was to Bodkin that the dead man's last words were addressed.

Staff-Surgeon Sawley stated at the inquest that he found Henderson in a semi-conscious condition with a contused lacerated wound above the bridge of the nose, and the wound communicated with the brain. There was no singing and no sign of powder.

An American took place immediately Henderson arrived at the hospital. It was then seen that there was a puncture which could not have been caused by a fall. The firearm must have been placed close to the skin.

HOW IRISH QUESTION MAY BE SETTLED.

Premier Believed To Be Considering Exclusion Proposal.

"RICHEST SLICE."

Four Ulster Counties May Be Left
Out with Option.

There is excellent reason for believing that the Prime Minister has under serious consideration a proposal for the exclusion of four Ulster counties from the operation of the Home Rule Bill—Antrim, Derry, Down, and Armagh—as a basis for the settlement of the Irish question.

Exclusion of the four north-eastern counties would, according to the News of the World, be for a fixed term of years, with a provision that at the end of the specified period the Irish system or of continuing their separate existence.

Should such a scheme receive the sanction of the Cabinet, other changes in the Bill would necessarily follow, these including a larger grant from the Imperial Exchequer to the Irish Parliament to make good the loss of revenue from the eleventh-hour exclusion of the richest slice of Ulster.

Meanwhile the gravest anxiety exists in Nationalist quarters as to the concessions which the Prime Minister has promised to make.

"STOUTLY RESISTED."

There is no doubt the exclusion of even a portion of Ulster would be stoutly resisted by the Irishmen, and it is doubtful whether Mr. Redmond would take upon himself the responsibility of consenting to such an arrangement until he had received the consent of the Irish Convention.

As far as it is possible to form an estimate at the moment, the Irish Convention would condemn the proposed compromise in the clearest and most unequivocal way.

The failure to find concessions which meet with the general approval of Ministerialists and Nationalists leaves the Government the only alternative of pushing on with the Bill in its present form.

Meanwhile the Opposition policy will be directed to accelerating the production of the Government proposals, and nothing will be left undone which can force the pace.

TWO MONTHS' WAIT.

Some two months, however, will probably elapse before the Prime Minister is able to make the promised suggestions for settlement.

In view of the suggested exclusion of the Northern counties of Ulster from the Home Rule Bill, it is interesting to note the numerical strength of the religious bodies:—

	Catholics.	Protestants.	Total Pop.
County Down	21	20,589	20,589
County Antrim	20.3	79.7	80,811
County Derry	41.4	58.6	118,621
County Armagh	48.3	51.7	118,225

Ulster includes nine counties, four—Down, Antrim, Derry and Armagh—overwhelmingly Protestant and the rest overwhelmingly Catholic.

ADJOURNMENT TO BE MOVED?

A motion to adjourn the House may possibly be made this week by the Opposition in connection with Mr. Gulland's speech during the Wick elections.

Recent references to it in the House of Commons are stated not to have been, as was generally supposed, good-humoured banter, but to have been made with the object of provoking an explanation from Mr. Gulland. Unless the Scottish Whigs seize an early opportunity to make a statement the Opposition will move an adjournment.

ALL DEAD AND DUMB AT WEDDING

Not only were the bride and bridegroom at a Toulon wedding on Saturday deaf and dumb, but the three witnesses were similarly afflicted.

In conformity with French custom, says the Matin, when the registers were signed the newly-married couple wrote a declaration affirming that they had read the Act under which they were married.

SOLOMON AND A CAT.

Nigger and Thomas were the names applied to a half-Persian cat, when it got Scarborough, of Barksides, appeared at Stratford to answer a complaint by Arthur Stacey, of Ilford, that he unlawfully detained the cat.

No response was made by the cat when called by both names in court.

The Chairman: The cat's evidence is not to be relied upon. I think we had better administer Solomon's judgment—have the cat cut in half.

The cat then mounted to the bench, and the chairman said, "It seems to prefer the charge book." Eventually the defendant agreed to give up the cat on payment of 2s. 6d.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

Our special weather forecast for to-day is:—Generally south-westerly and westerly winds; changeable; some fair periods; occasional rain; moderate temperature. Lighting-up time: 5.13 p.m. High-water at London Bridge: 6.3 p.m.

LONDON OBSERVATIONS. High-temperature, City, 6 p.m.: Barometer, 29.94 in. (tendency); temperature, 49 deg.; wind, S.W., gusty breeze; weather, changeable and cooler.

Sea passages will be rough.

ROYAL VISIT TO ARTIST'S STUDIO.

The King's Pleasure at Marble
Portrait of Himself.

FOOTBALL AND THEATRE.

The King and Queen, accompanied by Princess Mary, paid a visit yesterday to Sir George Frampton, R.A., at 90, Carlton-hill, where they inspected busts of themselves in the sculptor's studio.

That of the King has been completed in marble and is the gift of Alderman Sir Edward Cooper to the Guildhall.

It is a faithful piece of portraiture, and the King expressed great pleasure at the way in which it has been executed. He has ordered the work to be shown this year at the Royal Academy Exhibition.

The bust of the Queen, who wears the necklace presented by the Corporation upon her marriage, is still in progress. This also is to be added to the statuary at the Guildhall, and is the gift of Alderman Sir Charles Wakefield.

HONOUR FOR RUGBY CAPTAINS.

The King and Queen spent a happy holiday week-end in the manner of their humbler subjects. The King visited Twickenham on Saturday afternoon, and watched in company with the Prime Minister and 25,000 spectators, the international Rugby match between England and Ireland, which England won by 17 points to 12.

At the Rugby match the King had a tremendous reception. Before the game started the rival captains—R. W. Poulton (England) and R. A. Lloyd (Ireland)—were presented to his Majesty, and when the two teams appeared they lined up and gave three hearty cheers for the King.

In the evening the King, accompanied by the Queen, Princess Mary, and suite, paid an informal visit to Drury Lane Theatre, and were vastly entertained by the pantomime, "The Sleeping Beauty Re-Awakened."

While the King was at Twickenham, the Queen on Saturday afternoon paid a private visit to the Dartmouth Home for Crippled Boys at Blackheath.

THE QUEEN IN WORKSHOPS.

Her Majesty was conducted over the whole building and saw the boys at their various occupations in the shoemaking and tailoring workshops. The Queen was very interested in what she saw, and complimented the little workmen. In the tailoring room she had a friendly chat with a little boy who has lost both his legs.

Then at night the Drury Lane pantomime greatly amused the King and the Queen and Princess Mary. The Queen, in particular, leant back in her chair and laughed with infectious and uncontrolled heartiness many times.

Whenever George Graves and Will Evans put in an appearance on the stage their Majesties leaned forward eagerly in anticipation of great fun.

The scenes that amused the royal party most were the scarecrow scene between George Graves and Will Evans, the eccentric dancing of Stanley Lupino, the burlesque of the tango craze, the "Oz" scene between the amateur photographers, and the great paperhanging scene.

George Graves' description of the raucous cheering of the chorus as "resembling a shareholders' meeting" made the King laugh heartily. And when he said that his singing of "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep" so affected people "that murmurs of 'steward' were heard throughout the song," the Queen leant back in her chair and gave herself up to unrestrained laughter for several minutes.

WHAT IS A MERE £5,000?

PARIS, Feb. 15.—Jack Johnson has written to the National Sporting Club, saying that he considers an offer of £5,000 for the fight with Langford ridiculous. The tone of the letter appears to be such as to preclude the possibility of Johnson making a public reappearance in England.—Reuter.

FIRST ATLANTIC FLIGHT ENTRY.

The first formal entry has been made for The Daily Mail £10,000 prize for the first waterplane flight across the Atlantic in seventy-two hours.

The entry is made by the Aero Club of America on behalf of Mr. Rodman Wanamaker, son of the Philadelphia business magnate. He is supplying the money for the construction of a great horse-power flying boat by Mr. Glenn Curtiss, the American aviator and waterplane constructor.

The entry has been received by the Royal Aero Club of the United Kingdom, which controls all the arrangements for the competition. The entrance fee of £100 has been cabled to the Royal Aero Club. It is hoped that the attempt may be made in either August or September. The distance to be covered is about 1,800 miles.

Mr. Rodman Wanamaker's flying boat will be navigated by two airmen. One will be Lieutenant J. C. Porte, the famous British aviator, who was formerly in the submarine service. The other will be an American aviator.

PRESIDED AT BROTHER'S EXECUTION

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—A telegram from Chin-hua relates how a rebel captain named Martinez was forced to preside at the execution of his brother and father-in-law, named Benditz, who were condemned to death for the murder of an American.

The prisoner placed his Captain Martinez to spare them, but the latter unflinchingly carried out General Villa's orders.—Reuter.

FIGHTS FOR THREE SEATS.

Mr. Masterman's Task in Bethnal Green—
Two Other By-Elections.

Three singularly interesting by-elections are taking place this week—two in the East End of London and one in South Bucks.

Here are the constituencies and the candidates:—
WEDNESDAY—South Bucks. Candidates: Mr. W. B. Du Pre (U.), Mr. T. Mosley (L.).
THURSDAY—South-West Bethnal Green. Candidates: Major Sir Matthew Wilson (U.), Mr. C. F. G. Masterman (L.), Mr. J. Scott (Socialist).
FRIDAY—Poplar. Candidates: Mr. R. Kerr (U.), Mr. A. W. Yeo (L.), Mr. Jack Jones (Socialist).

The fact that in two of these constituencies, where the seat has been held by a Liberal, there are three-cornered fights, gives additional interest to the contest.

It is in the Bethnal Green fight perhaps that the main interest centres. Here Mr. Masterman, just raised to Cabinet rank, has the fight of his political life.

At the last election his majority was only 184, and now, as then, he is fighting a Socialist as well as a Unionist.

With the additional glamour of a Cabinet Minister upon him, Mr. Masterman's supporters are hoping that he will receive a greater amount of support than at the last election.

Strangely enough, both in Poplar and Bethnal Green there is much apathy regarding the Ulster question, uppermost in men's minds at Westminster.

"Bread-and-butter politics necessarily prevail in drab constituencies like these," said a political expert last night, "and the voters will support the man who offers them an exact pat of butter." (Photographs on page 11.)

SHARING THEIR EXILE.

Wives of Deported Labour Leaders Leave
South Africa for England.

JOHANNESBURG, Feb. 15.—Mrs. Bain and Mrs. Watson, the wives of the deported Labour leaders, left this morning for Capetown, en route for England.

They will catch the liner—Grantsville Castle—in which Mrs. Poutsma, the wife of another deported Labour leader, is also sailing.

A crowd of several thousands gathered at the station. "The Red Flag" was sung.

Town Councillor Clarke made a speech in which he said they were not bidding farewell to Mrs. Bain and Mrs. Watson, who would soon be back.

The train steamed out amid cheers.—Reuter.

HIS LIFE FOR HIS COMRADE.

"He was a hero and he died trying to save a comrade's life. We need not go to fiction for heroes for we meet them in everyday life."

Thus spoke the coroner at a Hampstead inquest on Saturday regarding the death of John Coleman, a foreman ganger on the Metropolitan Railway, who was knocked down by a train.

Walter Halsey, under foreman of platelayers, said that as two trains approached, John Lupton, a platelayer, fell across the rail on his back. Deceased raised him partly, but missed his footing and fell on the up line. Deceased was struck and killed, but Lupton got up and was uninjured.

The jury returned a verdict of Accidental Death.

TEN HOURS' SEARCH FOR INTRUDER

A daring burglary was discovered in the Strand early yesterday morning.

Peeping through the aperture of the shop window of Mr. Murray-Smith, jeweller, the policeman on duty discovered a man on the premises. The officer gave the alarm and the premises were surrounded by a cordon of between forty and fifty officers.

After a ten hours' search a man was found in the upper floor of an empty building and was taken into custody. A considerable quantity of jewellery is missing from the window, as well as from a showcase in the shop.

FIGHT IN THE DARK.

Englishwoman's Struggle for Life with Masked Apache.

IN DEAD OF NIGHT.

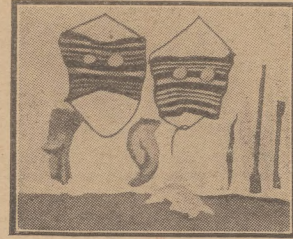

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

PARIS, Feb. 15.—A thrilling story of a wife's fight with masked robbers was narrated by Mrs. George Lowenstein, a wealthy Englishman, yesterday.

Mrs. Lowenstein, who lives in the fashionable quarter of the Avenue Niel, near the Arc de Triomphe, was early yesterday morning the victim of a desperate attempt on her life.

Her husband was formerly in business in London, and since his retirement he has lived in a flat here.

My wife, who is just over fifty years of age, was aroused from sleep in the morning, at about two o'clock, by someone attempting to gag her," said Mr. Lowenstein.

The masks, gloves and tools used by Mrs. Lowenstein's assailants.

"In the darkness she could not see anything, but with all her strength she resisted the efforts made to force a napkin in her mouth."

"So vigorous was her defence that she succeeded in pushing off her aggressor, who, however, attempted to strangle her."

"At this point she managed to press an electric button and so switch on the light, which revealed to her a young apache with a mask over his eyes."

"Behind him, also wearing a mask, was crouching another man. They both fled from the room."

"Mrs. Lowenstein immediately ran into my room. I was sleeping and had not heard anything, and when my wife told me of her frightful adventure I thought she had been dreaming."

"I entered her room and was convinced of the truth of the story. I called a janitor and a number of policemen, but although they searched the house and neighbourhood, the men had disappeared."

"After a search lasting nearly two hours, they were found shaking with fear and cold behind some bushes in the courtyard. They offered no resistance."

When taken to the police station one of the men was recognised as Chapuis, nineteen, the son of a cook formerly employed by Mr. Lowenstein. His companion only came out of prison a month ago. (Photographs on page 3.)

WHOLE FAMILY SHOT DEAD.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

TONBRIDGE, Feb. 15.—A terrible tragedy occurred here late on Friday night, resulting in the death of a father and his three children, aged six, five and three years.

The father, named Standen, a laundry-keeper, remained in bed all day, saying he was not well, and when the housekeeper entered the room she found the man and his children lying dead.

All had been shot, and it is presumed that the father, whose wife died some time ago, lost his reason, and after killing his children took his own life. (Photographs on page 10.)

GUNMAN IN THE CAR.

Strange Story of Armed Motorist's Exploits in Three Counties.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

SALISBURY, Feb. 15.—An all-day search by the police in Wiltshire, Hampshire and Dorset for an armed motorist who threatened a farmer and a police inspector, with revolvers ended at night in an arrest.

Shortly after 8 a.m. a motorist, accompanied by a chauffeur, called at a garage in Shaftesbury for petrol. The proprietor poured about twenty-eight gallons of petrol in the tank, but the motorist refused to pay and drove away.

Later a neighbouring farmer called at the garage and stated that a motorist, evidently the same man, had called at his farmhouse and demanded petrol at the point of a revolver. When the motorist said that bullets would soon be flying about. The farmer took the door, and the motorist, who had produced a revolver, drove away.

The police were communicated with, and the motorist was followed into Wiltshire.

At Wilton, four miles from Salisbury, Inspector Wells, who had received warning, signalled the pursued motorist to stop. But the chauffeur put on top speed, and his companion pointed two revolvers at the inspector. The motor-car was followed through Stapleford to Maiden Bradley, where the track of it was lost.

Later a car answering the description was seen at Mere in Wiltshire.

Late to-night the Lyndhurst (Hampshire) police arrested a man named Bond, of Purzey Lodge, near Lyndhurst. The police description of him is that he is about thirty years of age, six feet in height, and was wearing a khaki helmet and putties and a dark overcoat lined with felt.

He is described as of the opinion of the men, aged twenty-three, and was a resident at Lyndhurst for some time.

Bond was charged with obtaining sixteen gallons of petrol and two head lights to the value of £15 from a farmer by means of a trick.

WOMEN'S STILT HEELS.

Blue and Black Shoes of Chinese Design
Coming Into Favour.

High heels, almost stilt-like in altitude, form the latest freak of fashion in women's shoes.

Women this season will wear shoes with high heels similar in appearance and shape to the old-fashioned crumpled Chinese shoes, and the base of some of these is no bigger than a shilling.

These high heels have come to London from Paris, but there is also a new American heel now appearing in West London shops which has a shaped heel, and which is called the "kidney" heel.

There is a decided return to high heels and pointed toes, said the manager of a West London shop to The Daily Mirror. "The square toe and the square Cuban heel are replaced by the more shapely heel and the toe with the long vamp."

Bright-coloured tops to shoes are also coming into favour. For instance, there is a pale sky-blue on a black, corset shoe with a black patent base. Shoes with canary-yellow uppers and black bases are also popular.

DIRECTOR'S OUTBURST.

A scene at a directors' meeting, when one of those present declared that certain proposals were "most immoral," was described at Bow-street when the hearing was resumed of the summonses against eighteen defendants—nine Army officers and nine employees of Messrs. Lipton's, Limited. They are accused of alleged conspiracy in connection with Army canteens.

The magistrate intimated that when informations were laid warrants would be issued for the arrest of Minto and Ness, who are at present out of the jurisdiction of the Court.

Mr. E. S. Sawyer, who left Lipton's employ, described a conversation in Mr. Cassfield's room towards the end of 1910, when his commission was under discussion. The firm considered they did not make enough out of canteens, and witness was offered a rise in his commission of 50 per cent. on certain conditions.

Counsel: Was anything said about payments continuing?—Nothing, but Mr. John Grey at the directors' meeting said it was a most immoral thing, and he would have said so to the witness.

When Mr. Grey said that did any of the others say anything?—No, there was no evidence.

The hearing was adjourned till Friday week.

NURSE'S POISON BOTTLE ERROR.

The story of a nurse's mistake in giving poison for medicine was told on Saturday at an inquest at West Heath Hospital for Consumptives, Birmingham, concerning the death of William Kendall, aged thirty-three, a traveller.

The deceased, Dr. Legnatt, the medical superintendent, stated, was admitted on the previous Saturday suffering from advanced consumption. He prescribed a stock cough mixture and an inhalation. Both were kept in the poison cupboard.

Ethel Freer, the nurse, said she took the bottle from the cupboard and gave three patients the medicine. She found that she had made a mistake when one of the patients complained that the medicine was hot. The two other patients, it was stated, suffered from sickness, but soon recovered.

The jury found that death was due to Natural Causes, slightly accelerated by the dose of poison.

The house in Harlesden.

A tragic discovery was made in Westella-road, where a family of five were found dead by Mr. F. H. Horner, who lives at the same address. The family consisted of Walter Johnson, a tramway motorman, his wife and their three children.—(Daily Mirror) photographs.)

£6000

COMPETITION

1,205 CASH PRIZES

1st Prize, £100	2nd Prize, £50
3rd " - £25	100 Prizes of £1
4th " - £15	100 " " 10/-
5th Prize - £10	1000 " " 5/-

To introduce the Regesan Toilet Articles it has been arranged that £6000 shall be distributed through Boots, The Chemists, as prizes in a word-making competition. This competition has been promoted at enormous expense, with the sole idea of inducing the public to try Regesan Toilet Articles, knowing that they will appreciate their many excellent qualities, and that it will lead to their large and regular use.

It is a simple, interesting and instructive competition, in which everyone has an equal chance of winning a prize.

All you have to do is to make as many words (of four letters or more) as you can from the eighteen letters forming the words

Regesan Toilet Cream

Here are a few examples—Magistrate—Great—Time—Sane.

NO ENTRANCE FEE.

There is no entrance fee, but competitors must attach to their list a receipt for one of the following Regesan Toilet Articles, which can only be bought at the different branches of BOOTS, The Chemists. The quality of Regesan Preparations is so excellent that BOOTS have no hesitation in giving them their unqualified guarantee.

Only receipts for articles purchased between February 16th and March 9th will be accepted.

Regesan Toilet Cream 10½d. and 1/6

Regesan Shaving Stick 9½d.

Regesan Tooth Paste 9d.

Box of 3 Tablets of Regesan Toilet Soap 1/3

Box of 7 Regesan Shampoo Powders 9d.

Regesan Hair Tonic 1/11 & 3/9

Regesan Brillantine 9d. & 1/4

RULES OF COMPETITION.

Lists of words must be written on one side of the paper only, and each sheet must bear the competitor's name and address at the top.

The total number of words made must be marked on the first sheet of the list. In the event of a tie the neatest and clearest list will take precedence. Should there be a tie between the number of words sent in and also a dead level in the neatness and clearness, then the judges reserve the right to divide the prizes.

In previous competitions of this nature, competitors possessing elaborate and expensive dictionaries have had an unfair advantage, as it enabled them to include practically unknown and highly technical words. The judges, therefore, in making their awards, will use only the following three dictionaries—Nuttall's, Collins's, Chambers 20th Century. All of these can be obtained at any of Boots' branches, at a cost of under 3/-, and are excellent representative dictionaries of the English language. Only words contained in these dictionaries will be counted. Proper names and words of three letters or under must not be used.

No employee of Regesan Ltd., or of BOOTS, The Chemists, will be allowed compete. No competitor can win more than one prize.

Entries, with certificate attached, must be received by March 9th. Any arriving after that date will be disqualified.

Prizes will be paid on March 31st. List of Prize-winners will be published in the Daily Mail and Daily News of that date.

Entries must be addressed to—"REGESAN LTD., TRENT STREET, NOTTINGHAM." Mark your envelope "COMPETITION."

CLOSING DATE MARCH 9th.

The following gentlemen have kindly consented to form a Committee to award the Prizes:—

G. GODLEY, Esq., Advertisement Manager "Daily Mirror."

R. LEE, Esq., Advertisement Manager "Daily Telegraph."

H. SIMONIS, Esq., Director "Daily News" and "Star."

The counting will be under the supervision of an independent firm of Chartered Accountants, whose certificate will be published with the list of winners. The decision of the Committee must be accepted as being final.

Regesan

KING OF HEALTH

is sold only by BOOTS, The Chemists, who guarantee it, as they do all Regesan Preparations, to be the best of its kind extant. The largest retail chemists in the world would not give such a guarantee unless they were certain they were justified in doing so.

Regesan Toilet Cream is an entirely original form of skin food, which combines the advantages of a vanishing cream with those of a good cold cream. Regesan Cream is scientifically constituted to aid Nature in nourishing and beautifying the skin. It cleanses the pores, enabling them to fulfil their natural functions, and makes the skin pliable, yet firm, clear and velvety.

In cases where the skin has been neglected, the beneficial properties of Regesan Toilet Cream can be proved on the first application. Unless the skin is in perfect condition, a slight tingling occurs, which is due to the astringent nature of the cream. This is only of short duration, but it proves that the cream is stimulating and toning up the skin. After a few applications the smarting will not occur, which means that the skin has become perfectly healthy.

Regesan Toilet Cream is delightfully perfumed, is non-greasy, and cannot possibly grow hair. Sold only at Boots The Chemists.

Regesan Shampoo Powders.

Regesan Shampoo Powders should not be confused with other Shampoo Powders. They stand quite alone. They have no rival. They are easy and pleasant to use and thorough in their effect. They promote a rich growth of healthy hair, soft, bright and fluffy. No matter if your hair be thin or thick, dry or greasy, it is bound to benefit by the regular use of Regesan Shampoo Powders. Your hair may be beautiful already, but you have no idea how much more beautiful it could be if you used Regesan Shampoo Powders.

A great advantage Regesan Shampoo Powders possess is that it is so easy to dress your hair after using. Within a short time after shampooing the hair you can dress it in any prevailing fashion without the slightest difficulty. Ladies will appreciate this point. Sold only at Boots, The Chemists.

Regesan Tooth Paste.

Many thousands of people will tell you that they consider Regesan Tooth Paste is the most perfect tooth paste in existence. It is compounded according to a formula approved by the highest dental authorities, and does not merely clean the teeth, but removes the germs of decay and protects them. Besides cleansing and protecting the teeth, Regesan Tooth Paste has a wonderfully beneficial action on the gums, it tightens them up and keeps them firm and healthy.

Try Regesan Tooth Paste to-morrow. You are certain to find it a change for the better. It is the most efficient cleanser of teeth in existence.

THIS MORNING'S GOSSIP

Mr. Andrew Carnegie.

Mr. Carnegie filmed. A cinema producer told me yesterday that the cinema world was proud of the fact that it had enrolled Mr. Andrew Carnegie as a "film actor." Mr. Carnegie was persuaded by a fascinating New York actress to pose with her in a scene for a film drama. The multi-millionaire and the actress played their parts in the garden of his palace in Fifth Avenue, New York. The cinema producers are now hoping that they may induce Mr. John D. Rockefeller to follow Mr. Carnegie's example.

Her Winning Way.

The actress in the case is Miss Norma Phillips, and she has a wonderful way with her of persuading well-known people to be "filmed." They cannot resist her pleading tongue. Miss Phillips tearfully explained to the millionaire that she had come from a sick bed where she was suffering from the effects of a bad fall from a horse, particularly to be photographed with him. And the gallant Laird of Skibo surrendered.

Lord Claud.

Lord Claud Hamilton, whose appointment of an American as manager of the Great Eastern Railway has aroused such controversy, is the youngest man for his age in the country. He is seventy-six years old, and looks about fifty. Upright, brisk and even dapper in appearance, Lord Claud is the most outspoken and fearless Tory in the House. He said once of his cousins, the Cecils: "They were brought up very badly indeed. They were allowed to slouch over their meals. No wonder they stoop now. And they used to answer their mother and father back. No wonder they have no sense of discipline."

A Variety Theatre Revolution.

I hear that there will be important changes in the managementship and proprietorship of one of the most important London variety syndicates shortly. This will directly affect the policy of several halls in the West End.

"These for Remembrance."

I saw a pretty incident outside the Garrick Theatre the other day. A middle-aged man walked up to the flower girl who stands on the kerb and bought her entire stock of violets. Then he crossed the road and placed them at the foot of Sir Henry Irving's statue.

Startling Evidence.

A correspondent, as "evidence of the present mild weather," has thoughtfully sent me a live wasp that flew into his parlour on Saturday. I appreciate the kindly thought, but I really don't like this kind of evidence.

109 Years in the Thames.

After having been submerged in the Thames for 109 years, the foundation stone of the East India Dock, London, E., has just been brought to light as a result of alterations. Laid on "March 4, 1804, by Mr. Joseph Hudart, F.R.S.," it was found at the base of one of the old quay walls in the import dock. The stone bears the names of the then chairman and vice-chairman of the East India Dock Company, which was a subsidiary company of the East India Company. The dock was originally made for ships trading with the East.

A Portrait in Langouste.

Parisians have invented a new dish, "la langouste Tristan Bernard." The rock lobster reclines on a bed of hard-boiled eggs, mingled with sliced gherkins and anchovy paste, and the head of the crustacean is cushioned on crushed truffles arranged to represent the handsome Assyrian beard of the genial playwright. Another new dish is the "sole tango," which will probably be followed by the "turbot farlana."

The Tango Cocktail.

But it is in the matter of drinks that Parisians show most ingenuity. At all the best bars the "tango cocktail" is much in demand. It is composed of varying quantities of curacao, sirop de grenadine, angostura bitters, fraiseite, peach bitters, and maraschino. After a peppering of nutmeg and sugar, it is served with a cherry and a slice of mandarine.

Tiring for the Mixer.

Another favourite cocktail, la Loie Fuller, contains no fewer than fifteen different liqueurs, including cassia, anisette, menthe verte and menthe blanche, kummel, prunelle, cherry-brandy, kirsch, chartreuse jaune and chartreuse verte. If one does not get the proper illuminated rainbow effect from this mixture, it should surely be attained after a glass of the Loie Fuller Maxixe, which is made by mixing twenty-three liqueurs of different densities. The barman has been known to fall asleep after the seventeenth or eighteenth contribution to the deadly beverage.

Green Hair in the Paris Streets.

Even Paris was rather surprised last week when a charming lady in an attractive otter-skin coat was noticed strolling in the Chaussee d'Antin wearing under an emerald-green hat emerald-green hair.

She was quickly the centre of an excited group of idlers, which, as the news spread, grew into a considerable crowd. The daring lady stood it for a few minutes, then her pluck failed her and she jumped into a passing taxicab and disappeared.

A Promising Artist.

I wonder how many barristers' daughters are at present making fame for themselves on the stage? I know at least twenty now performing in the West of London. The latest example is Miss Gladys Trevor, who has made such a success in "The Sleeping Beauty Awakened." The daughter of a well-known barrister, Miss Trevor has never before been on the stage.

Miss Gladys Trevor.

A Cloak-Room Mystery.

By the way, where do all the fees tossed over the counter of the average cloak-room go to? Do the attendants get them all? I doubt it. In many cases, I understand, they get a small percentage of the gross tips, and the rest goes to furnishing the staff with new uniforms.

How True.

"It doesn't matter so much what a man's salary is," said a cynical married man, "as what his wife spends."

A Night Club?

I told you to expect a campaign against the night clubs, and now the first move has been made by Sir Charles Henry, who is going to ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in the House of Commons whether "he is aware that certain places in London, under the denomination of clubs, are carrying on what is essentially a restaurant business and are in a position to keep open in trade without any restriction as to the hours of closing, and whether he will take into consideration the adoption of measures to ensure that hotels and restaurants, which are called upon to pay substantial licence duties and to conform to regulations as regards the closing of their premises, shall not be prejudiced and suffer disadvantage through this competition."

Loaded Dice.

All the London restaurants, except perhaps Romano's, have been badly hit by the competition of the supper clubs. A sane legislative way of dealing with the problem, according to the Rambler's view, would be to extend the hours in which the restaurants may remain open.

Excise Trouble.

Meanwhile I hear on the highest authority that many of London's new night clubs are to be involved in serious trouble with the Excise people. Among the exceptions are the Ldus, Murray's, the Four Hundred and the cosy New Palm Club. A lot of the others will probably be closed down in the near future.

What About the Salary?

Mr. Clifton Crawford, the Gaiety's young Scots actor, tells me he was amused to find so many critics comparing him to his friend

Mr. Clifton Crawford.

Mr. Joseph Coyne, after his debut. As he has a keen Scots wit, he promptly wired Mr. Coyne: "Glad to see from the papers that you've made a great success. Congratulations." Mr. Coyne replied: "Thanks. Do I get the salary?" I understand that Mr. Crawford's reply was in the negative.

Why They Ran from White Men.

Many and varied reasons have suggested to native tribes that the white man is best avoided. Never, perhaps, was a more curious reason advanced than that which a newly-discovered Eskimo tribe gave to the explorer Stefansson. He managed to make friends with them, and asked them why they ran away from him and men like him. "Our fathers," they replied, "ran when they saw smoke, and we run." They have now got rid of their fears and have been brought well into touch with white traders.

Mr. Asquith Sees and Waits.

When leaving the Rugby international match at Twickenham on Saturday Mr. Asquith was delayed at the gates of the ground by the crowd which surrounded his motor-car. He took in great good part the chaff and cheers to which he was treated and laughed heartily when the crowd shouted, "Wait and see!" After some delay the police were able to make a way for his car, and he drove off, followed by loud cheers.

Lord Robert on Purity.

Quite the most remarkable amendment to the Address in the House of Commons is to be moved by Lord Robert Cecil. It contains this wording: "But humbly regrets that his Majesty's Government do not propose to take any steps for preventing the growing debasement of the accustomed standard of purity in public life." I know that Lord Robert is an ingenious person, but how on earth is he going to define "the accustomed standard of purity in public life?"

The Fleshly School.

Nevertheless, I am not entirely surprised at the amendment. There is no doubt that we are living in a period when life is wearing a very loose petticoat.

Do any of you remember the diatribe which poor Robert Buchanan poured upon Dante Gabriel Rossetti in an article called "The Fleshly School of Poetry"? That article was largely dictated by personal bias, but it contained quite a lot of truth. Buchanan pointed out that fleshliness was spreading throughout the country. He instanced the shop windows as evidence, the comic papers, the music-halls and the theatres, besides the poetry and art of the moment.

The Suggestive Novel.

If this was true in Buchanan's day, it is doubly true now. I was looking into a cheap bookseller's shop the other day, where at least a hundred paper-backed novels were displayed to view. On every cover was a woman either in suggestive dress or in a suggestive attitude. Most of the titles were suggestive.

The Woman of the Moment.

And having looked at the bookshop, the periodicals and the posters, I turned my attention to the women passing along the street. Without being a humorist or a moralist, it was impossible to deny that the garb of many was startling in its suggestiveness. The women might have been the originals of the posters or the illustrations in the weekly journals.

Hail to Mrs. Grundy.

Lord Robert Cecil's amendment may come to nought, but, as I have hinted in these columns before, I am sure we are in for a great purity crusade shortly. The national character will probably reassert itself, and that banished queen, Mrs. Grundy, will return amidst salvos of cheering.

The Wedgwood Matchbox.

The latest matchbox-case is designed as imitation Wedgwood. It is quite effective, and costs only a few pence.

Do You Like Apples?

F. P. Raynam, the airman, is not easily unnerved. I heard a typical story about him at Hendon yesterday. He was flying recently from Hendon to Brookland with Mr. D. G. Young—now of the Royal Flying Corps—and when about half-way on the journey something went wrong, and a hurried forced landing had to be made. The plane came down in the middle of an orchard, and a nasty smash seemed inevitable. As the two airmen skimmed the tops of the fruit trees Raynam turned quietly to his companion and asked in casual tones: "Do you like apples?"

Closing Date, Feb. 24

This is a simple, pleasurable competition, not involving any arduous work or hunting through voluminous dictionaries. Only fifty words have to be made, and the dictionaries before the judges have been purposely selected as being neither voluminous nor expensive, and for the further reason that one of them is to be found in almost every household.

Each list of words must be accompanied by the coupon to be found in every 1s. box of seven Oatine Shampoo Powders. The coupon referred to gives the full list of conditions to be observed by competitors and also gives the names of the dictionaries which will be before the examiners, and only words to be found therein will be accepted.

No one in the employment of, or in any way connected with, The Oatine Company, will be allowed to compete.

The following gentlemen have agreed to act as a committee and will award the prizes, thus ensuring an absolutely independent and impartial decision for all competitors, and the decision of this committee is final:

LOUIS KAUFMAN, ESQ., General Manager "TRUTH."
H. CARGILL, ESQ., Advertisement Manager "JOHN BULL."
J. DODDS, ESQ., Advertisement Manager "DAILY SKETCH."

Oatine Shampoo Powders

7 PACKETS IN A BOX, 1/- Sold by all Chemists. IN TWO VARIETIES:

For Dry Hair in Red Packets. For GREASY HAIR in Green Packets.

The ordinary Shampoo Powder, while a decided improvement, in most cases, on the cake of toilet soap, yet leaves much to be desired in that it is made in only one variety to suit all hair conditions. There is, however, a great difference in people's hair, some having too much oil, and some hair which is very dry. The same shampoo will not suit both. It will remove oil that cannot be spared from the dry hair, making it brittle, harsh and difficult to do up after washing. With oily hair, on the contrary, it will not remove the excess of oil, sometimes clogging and matting the hair yet further.

Recognising these conditions, The Oatine Company have brought out two varieties of Shampoo Powder. Think under which class your hair comes, and order the shampoo designed to suit your particular case.

WHICH FOR YOU?

MAKE YOUR PURCHASE EARLY

In order to obtain the coupon referred to above, as it gives full particulars and rules of the competition together with the names of the dictionaries before the judges, so that before sending in your list you will be sure that all words made are admissible. This coupon should be carefully read before you begin compiling your list of words, and when buying ask for the special kind of Shampoo Powder to suit your particular requirements.

Send in your list as soon as it is completed in order to facilitate the labour of the judges. All entries, however, must be received by Tuesday, February 24. The list of prize-winners will be published in "The Daily Mail" of March 18th.

IF YOUR CHEMIST CANNOT SUPPLY YOU, SEND P.O. FOR ONE SHILLING DIRECT TO US, AND YOUR ORDER WILL BE DISPATCHED BY RETURN OF POST.

The Oatine Co., 719, Oatine Buildings, London, S.E.

In this competition it is only necessary to make FIFTY WORDS, and the prizes will be awarded to those competitors who send in lists of the 50 longest words that can be made from the 19 letters contained in the words

Madame Nausbaumer (late of Maison Drecoll, Paris) is at Handleys, Ltd., Palmerston Road, Southsea, for a fortnight.

She will assist our patrons in selecting and fitting their corsets.

She will introduce the new models of the Royal Worcester Corsets. These models bring to its perfection the "nature" line which has so long been the quest of every corset designer.

Some are "thigh-diminishing" models; some boneless, others almost boneless.

Masterly cutting now does what heavy boning did before.

Call and see Madame Nausbaumer, and hear what she has to say.

NEW STYLES IN HAIRDRESSING.

Coiffure Changes Needed to Give Spring Hats Their Full Value.

TO-DAY'S DEMONSTRATION

Every Stage of Various Processes Shown on Living Models.

One of the most interesting demonstrations in The Daily Mirror academy of shopping will take place this afternoon, at three o'clock, in the millinery department of Selfridge's, Oxford-street. Practical lessons in artistic hairdressing to suit the new spring hats will be the feature. Two great demonstrations, attended by hundreds of women, have already shown the right way of choosing a hat, and the shapes and colours suitable for different types of faces. In many cases the new spring hats will make an entire change of coiffure necessary, if they are to be worn to the best advantage. Though the hat may fit the face, and the colours go with the complexion, the effect will be spoiled unless the hair is dressed to suit the type of hat.

TO SUIT THE TILTED BRIM.

The woman who wore last season a small close-fitting hat pulled well down over her head will have to make a drastic change in her coiffure in order to wear the new platform, with its tilted brim showing more of the hair than has been visible out of doors for some seasons past. To-day she will be able to take her first lesson in the season's hairdressing styles, and to choose,

TODAY—"Hairdressing in Relation to New Spring Millinery." 3 p.m. At Selfridge's, Oxford-street. WEDNESDAY NEXT—"How to Choose a Fashion" (lecture demonstration with new spring models). 3 p.m. At Whiteley's, Queen's-road, W. "The Sporting Girl." Demonstration of new modes for varied types. Peter Robinson's, Oxford-circus. Date to be announced.

under expert guidance, the coiffure which most becomes her. All women are invited, and no tickets are necessary.

A raised platform will be erected in the spacious millinery department on the second floor, and the hairdressing will take place, on living models, in full view of the visitors.

VOGUE OF THE SUGAR-LOAF.

Every stage of the various processes—the formation and adjustment of the new tangette curl, for instance—will be practically demonstrated. Special interest will attach to the sugar-loaf, the very latest vogue—a style of coiffure suitable for both daytime and night.

The demonstrator will show how plain women may be made pretty by hairdressing which harmonises with their features, and also the styles to be avoided by different types of women—and the reasons why.

As hundreds of women go through life with badly-dressed hair, which merely accentuates the weak points in their appearance, the demonstrator, one of the foremost experts in the art of hairdressing, will be glad to advise members of the audience as to the general style of coiffure which they will find most becoming to them.

HOW TO CHOOSE A FASHION

Special Attention to the Tailored Gown in Wednesday's Demonstration.

"How to Choose a Fashion" will be the subject of the third demonstration in The Daily Mirror academy of shopping.

It will take place on Wednesday afternoon, at three o'clock, in the costume department of Whiteley's, Queen's-road, W., when the season's novelties will be displayed.

One of the earliest spring requirements of the well-dressed woman is a smart tailor-made walking suit, which really forms the basis of her new season's outfit.

For this reason special attention will be paid on Wednesday to the tailored gown in all its forms, a striking development of the new mode being the advance of the three-piece gown.

There are important changes in the tailored fashions for 1914—even the simplest of coats and skirts have their distinctive notes of the season—and the demonstrator, by means of a varied display of the very newest models, will make clear to our visitors which among the many new creations of fashion are intended for the different types of woman—the tall or short, the full-figured or slender.

THE TOUCH OF TIME.

A woman who from girlhood has always given proper care to her face will never have a coarse, tired complexion; her wrinkles will only come quite late in life, and they will be small and of little conspicuousness. It is never too early to begin, and it is never too late to mend. Pomeroy Skin Food, a hygienic, natural cream, needs only to be lightly massaged into the face with the fingertips at night in order to make a visible difference to the complexion on the very first day. Feeding the skin and the cells and muscles beneath it will keep the complexion soft and fresh. Pomeroy Skin Food can be had of any chemist in eighteen-penny jars.—(Adv't.)

LIVING UP TO YOUR LOOKS.

Ought a Girl Not To Do Farm Work if She Looks Made for Drawing-Room?

"When I first announced my intention of taking up poultry and dairy farming in Canada, everyone gazed with surprise and held up hands in horror," said a particularly charming girl to me the other afternoon as she gave me tea in her dainty sitting-room.

"What! You take up farming in Canada! How utterly ridiculous!" was what all the other women said. "You look as if you ought to spend your life sitting in a drawing-room pouring out tea. You would make such a delightful lady of the manor!" That was what I heard on every side.

"Why, just because I happen to know how to put on my clothes and the most chic angle at which to wear my hats—" she went on indignantly, "why should I be bound down to a career I dislike simply because I look the part?"

I know quite well that, along with my fluffy frock and my smart hat, I can throw aside my frivolities and draw on, with a khaki shirt, a short khaki skirt and a pair of gaiters, and thick-soled boots, not only the outward semblance of a farmer, but a genuine liking for hard outdoor work. For my real ambition is to own a model farm and make as big a success of it as I can.

I fell to wondering if Mother Nature sometimes plays practical jokes with us and puts odd souls into bodies that don't match. Or is it merely the proverbial perversity of woman, and ought we to strive to live up to our appearance? D. E. H.

GIRLS AT THE WHEEL.

'Daily Mirror' Motoring Test Shows They Are Quick to Learn and Not Nervous.

After a fortnight of lessons the three girls taking part in The Daily Mirror men v. women motoring test are capable of driving cars about London almost like experienced chauffeurs.

They motored to Hatfield and back at the weekend and delicately manoeuvred their cars past vehicles and round tricky corners without a shade of nervousness.

Those in charge of this interesting test—it is to show whether the three girls can learn motor driving as quickly and efficiently as three men they are pitted against—told The Daily Mirror that they were surprised at the girls' skill and wonderful control of the steering wheel.

"They drive much better than we expected," said one official at the Motor Schools, Limited, training garage, in London-road, St. John's Wood, where training is being given. "They have learned things more quickly than the average man, and seem to possess stronger 'nerves' than most men when taking a car out for the first time.

The eldest of the pupils told The Daily Mirror that the only difficulty she encountered during the run of Hatfield was the changing of gear. "After our theoretical lessons we knew exactly what to do in encountering hills or turning corners," she said.

Another said that after they had started she "lost all her nervousness and had heaps of confidence."

"Really, I don't think there's ever been anything to equal the new

Spring Fashions

"They are so smart and stylish, and what I like most about them is that they are not the least bit exaggerated. They are really effective styles that can be carried out at little expense and are both simple and distinguished. It's years and years since I have felt so thoroughly satisfied with the new spring modes. There's no denying their prettiness and brightness."

"But wherever have you got all this good news from and where can I see these latest designs?"

"Why, in the new 'FASHIONS FOR ALL' (now on sale), the paper I always buy when I want to know anything about fashions. It only costs threepence and is simply packed with useful information."

"So that's the secret of your knowledge, is it? Well! I don't see why I shouldn't share it, too. I shall buy a copy of 'FASHIONS FOR ALL' to-day, and later on we will have another chat together about these beautiful new spring clothes you so admire. If you like them I'm sure I shall."

"Do! I should like to. By the way, when you do get 'FASHIONS FOR ALL' just look at the Lingerie Supplement. It's the most beautiful thing I've seen for years."

THE PICK OF THIS WEEK'S BARGAINS AND NOVELTIES

An All-Round Survey of the Opportunities To Be Found in the Shops.

Never a week passes now but that housewives, provided they keep an alert watch, may make profitable raids on the great shops.

For a fortnight onwards from to-day, for instance, Messrs. Peter Robinson's, Oxford-street, will offer tempting opportunities daily during their great white sale.

Lovely white lawn and lace shirts and blouses, of the new styles, delighted me in a week-end view. There are particularly good notions in sleeves. A crochet instil muslin blouse at 7s. 6d. impresses me as a most thrifty bargain.

What is the 1914 silhouette to be? The Royal Worcester Corset Company have drawn up a charming little handbook, which contains many coloured plates, depicting "The Curtain Drawn, and the Entry of the Authentic Styles for 1914."

A copy will be sent post free upon application to the Royal Worcester Warehouse Company, the Worcester Building, 76-78, Mortimer-street, London, W. It will be found most valuable to those who are just ordering their spring frocks.

CLEARANCE PRICES.

Clearance prices are appended to the large stock of a Manchester firm of general drapers, which Messrs. Thomas Wallis and Co., of Holborn-circus, are selling this week, because the firm has determined to find purchasers for the lot by the end of this month. Considering the huge range of stock and the low prices it is likely that it will be cleared by the date determined upon.

Messrs. Derry and Toms's early spring sale appeals with special force to women with the season before them and expensive daughters to take to balls and like festivities. The gloves that are being sold are cheap only in price, and the stockings, too, are very good investments.

Looking in at the London Glove Company's sale, which is still proceeding, I found some alluring bargains in wool sports coats, which with the special hall-mark of this firm's smartness are simply as cheap as can be at 9s. 11d. for the shot kind and only 6s. 11d. in the self colours, with caps to match at 1s. 8d. Ripple cloth dressing-jackets, made in the dainty kimono style, are priced at 2s. 8d. only, and the very warm and cosy molleton kimono dressing-gowns at 5s. 3d.

I must mention that Swan and Edgar are opening their bargain basement to-day and are offering goods from their regular stock at less than cost price.

A word more upon a "health" topic. It is to urge all who love their cup of tea and yet suffer after it from indigestion or nerves to send 2d. to cover the actual cost of postage of the free quarter of a pound sample of Tea Buds, which Messrs. Horrocks and Sutton, the well-known tea specialists, will forward. The address is Dept. M.L., 5-8, Water-lane, Great Tower-street, London, E.C.

A ROYAL VISIT.

As a souvenir of the visit paid by the King and Queen to Messrs. Horrocks, Crewdson and Co.'s mills at Preston, this firm has issued the story of its career in a very artistic booklet. I do not think there are many women who are not on excellent terms with the long-cloth that has made the name Horrocks famous all over the world. They will enjoy a perusal of this interesting story.

Readers of The Daily Mirror will remember with interest the recent "perfect figure quest" inaugurated by Mr. Eugen Sandow, and with the sensation it aroused still comparatively fresh in the mind, the announcement of its successful issue is of particular significance to every woman who would possess a perfect figure.

First prize has been awarded to Miss Peggy Molynieux, who was adjudged to be the most beautifully figured woman in Great Britain. The second is won by the Countess Beatrice Meho, and the third by Mrs. Ashton Harrison.

YOUR HEARING RESTORED

If you are handicapped by deafness you owe it to yourself to do all in your power to get your hearing back. This is possible by using the "Auriphone," the culminating triumph of Aurist Scientists. This tiny "pocket telephone" magnifies the slightest sound to the desired degree of loudness and simply makes the deaf hear. Its greatest success has been achieved where all else has failed. It costs nothing to test, as we give free demonstrations daily at our offices. Don't miss the opportunity. Every day your deafness gets more stubborn. If you cannot call, a card will bring our illustrated booklet to tell particulars, with all the deal should read.—Auriphones, Ltd., 38, Walter House, 418-422, Strand, London.—(Adv't.)

What Every Woman Forgets.

By HENRY FARMER.

CHAPTER XIII. (continued).

SUZANNE crossed to a window. Shall I darken the room a little?" she asked. "You find the light trying, don't you, Michael?" He was screwing up his eyes. "Wouldn't be a bad idea," he said. "But don't go afterwards. Stay and talk to me. What about poor old Carrie?"

She would go last night, Michael. She wasn't fit, but she insisted.

"She would."

"But she's coming some time to-day. She wants to see you—thank you."

Suzanne was partially screening the windows Cloan watched her. Her movements were unconsciously graceful—not a case of art concealing art. Her beautiful figure made a silhouette against one of the windows.

When she crossed to another window the Rajah's eyes following her, rather pathetically, rather like a dog's, with a wondering, baffled expression in them.

He seemed to have forgotten his sister; but he returned to her when he spoke again after a minute or so.

"I'm worried about her. She's my sister, don't you know?" He had not the gift of elaborate expression. He could give no better expression to his feelings now than by the speech, "She's my sister, don't you know."

Yet, perhaps, it conveyed more than any elaboration would have done.

"But," he went on, "I don't think I'll tackle her to-day. I hope I shall feel more like it tomorrow. And yet I can't give in to her. She must either chuck it or I cut off her allowance. If she spent the money on herself, it wouldn't matter. But it all goes to that cause, and the little gang of women who run it, live on it, and advertise themselves on it! Set a thief a thief; set a woman to tackle a woman. Suzanne, can't you work something?"

"I'm afraid, Michael, I have no influence with Carrie. I only irritate her."

The windows had been darkened. Suzanne seated herself.

"Bring your chair closer, Suzanne. I want you nearer to me."

She brought the chair close to the bed. He reached out a hand and grasped hers. It was shaky and dry.

"I say," he went on presently, "I hate being fussed over—don't like nurses—male or female. Bonsett has threatened me with them. If it's wanted—it's not going to be, if I can help it. Heaven!—would you look after me till I'm through?"

"Why, of course, Michael," answered Suzanne.

"Thanks. But I don't want you to be shut up all day here with me. You must get out—get fresh air. See that the old lady doesn't worry her head about me. She's had enough trouble in her time."

Suzanne bent her head a little; tears dimmed her dark eyes. A knock drew her to the door. Sir John's prescription had been made up. She gave the Rajah his dose.

"Muck!" he muttered, making a face. "But that don't matter—it it does me good."

It evidently served its purpose. When, nearly four hours later, Suzanne took his temperature, it was a point or so below 100. And Cloan remarked that he was feeling easier. He was the better, too, for having dozed after a meal of thin liquid in a bowl.

"I must have slept," he said. "Has Carrie been?"

"Yes. Your message was given her—at least, Carrie was told that you couldn't see her to-day, that you were not well enough, but hoped to do so tomorrow."

"How was she?"

"I don't know, Michael. I didn't see her myself."

"I say—no by-gones are by-gones with me."

Suzanne flushed. A wave of sudden jealousy had swept the Rajah, as if set in motion by some thought associated with his sister. But with a touch of bitterness of delay he has mastered the desire to cross-question his wife—ask her if she had seen or heard anything of Kavanagh since he had agreed to let by-gones be by-gones.

When Sir John Bonsett called at five o'clock he expressed himself pleased with his patient. His manner was a tonic in itself.

But he asked for a word alone with Mrs. Cloan.

"It's possible," he said, "that the temperature will rise in the night. Someone ought to pass the night with the Rajah. I've got his temperature down artificially. And he objects to nurses—male or female."

"What had Bonsett to say to you?" asked Cloan when Suzanne returned.

"He impressed on me how important it was for you to take the medicine regularly, even during the night. I'm going to stay the night with you and see that you do."

"I don't want to wear you out. I'm better, am feeling much more like it."

"Sir John Bonsett," said Suzanne, "belongs to the order of men who must be obeyed."

"Well, then," he bell-pushed long within Cloan's reach and he got hold of it—"you shall have a bed made up in the room."

"No, Michael, no!" She spoke rather quickly. "I shall get all the rest I want in that armchair. Don't ring, please! Good gracious, Michael, what is there in sitting up for one night? I would far rather rest in a chair. It will be so much better, more convenient, than—she laughed—the discomfort of getting out of bed every time the medicine is necessary, and then back again. And I should probably sleep like a top and forget all about it. In a chair I can sleep and rest perfectly—and yet have one eye open and on the clock—and the medicine bottle."

"Why not turn in properly and be snug," whispered Cloan rather huskily, the glow gathering in his eyes.

Suzanne moved a little distance away.

"My dear Michael, if—if it was a question of turning in properly and being—and being snug, I might just as well sleep in my own room, and leave the doors open; and you would sleep probably, and I should sleep, and the medicine is important. An armchair will provide just that slight element of novelty—"discomfort" had been a truer word—"that makes for light sleeping. I can sleep in a chair, with one eye open. I can't in bed."

A knock interrupted. More thin liquid in a bowl had arrived for Cloan. Suzanne brought it to him. He sat himself up in the bed sluggishly and lumberingly.

"I feel such a child—such a baby!" he muttered irritably, and when he had tasted the thin stuff with a spoon, rather noisily, he knew a strong desire, which he did not voice, to strengthen it up with a dash of brandy.

He put the bowl down beside the bed and sank back with a sigh of dissatisfaction, feeling empty, and nothing doing and nothing to do.

"Would you like me to read to you, Michael?"

"No—yes, I haven't seen a paper to-day. How's the Bunter-street mystery going on?"

Suzanne did not know. Mysteries did not appeal to her. The news that had interested her most in the morning paper was the announcement that Mr. "Fritz" Kavanagh had been appointed one of the Prime Minister's private secretaries. She had read also a description of the suffragette riot, and what was regarded as retaliation; a number of letters had been destroyed by fire in pill-boxes and a postman had been severely burned when collecting letters by a letter that had burst into flame explosively in his hands in a kind of uncanny spontaneous combustion way.

"I will get an evening paper, Michael."

She went to the library. Late afternoon editions had just been placed there. She had gathered one up when the telephone bell rang. Her eyes dilated nervously. So much that was romantic and painful and charged with struggle was associated with this particular instrument; it had been the vehicle of so much.

But it was ridiculous, this fancy that the man she had tried to exorcise from her thoughts and her heart, once with avowed gesture, as if he could be plucked out actually, was at the other end of the wire. She had written to him that there must be no more ringing up.

She picked up the instrument and "bulled" into it. A woman's voice asked if that was Menzies House.

"Yes. Who is speaking?"

But the question was met with a question instead of an answer.

"Is that a maid?" asked the woman's voice.

"No. I'm Mrs. Cloan. Who is speaking, please?"

"Mr. Morland's secretary, for Mr. Morland," replied the voice, rather a seductive, low-noted voice.

"Yes. Well?" The name was unknown to Suzanne.

"Could I speak to Mr. Cloan?"

"Mr. Cloan is ill—in bed."

"Oh."

"But any message—"

"Well, Mr. Morland was expecting either a visit or a letter from Mr. Cloan on a matter of business, and was surprised at not having heard from Mr. Cloan. He will be sorry to hear Mr. Cloan is ill. I will tell Mr. Morland when he returns. He is not in the office just now."

"What is Mr. Morland's address? I will write to him for Mr. Cloan, if necessary."

"What?" The seductive voice went a trifle shrill. "I can't catch what you say."

"What is Mr. Morland's address?"

"Oh—oh. 70a, Leadenhall-street."

"Thank you," Suzanne picked up a pencil.

"Good-bye."

Good-bye.

Suzanne wrote down the address, and returned to the Rajah's room.

Cloan turned his head and seemed glad to get her back.

"Mr. Morland—" she began.

He thrust his hands behind him, pushed himself up, and stared at her.

"How did you—"

The words seemed to escape him unawares. But he did not finish. He sank back in the bed and shut his eyes.

"What about him?" he asked.

"His private secretary has just rung up. Mr. Morland was expecting a visit from you or a letter on a matter of business, and was surprised at not hearing from you. I have explained; but if I can do anything for you, Michael, write—I shall be only too glad."

"As a matter of fact," said Cloan huskily, "I've written—wrote this morning, Suzanne, but the letter can't have reached her."

"Her, Michael?"

"The—the private secretary—Miss, Miss Bulstrode, Morland—Morland is interested in those Nagasaki concessions of mine."

Suzanne moved away slowly to the table whereon the medicine vial lay placed. Her back was turned. But she seemed to carry her head rather rigidly.

The blurred eyes were following her.

"Suzanne—"

She seemed not to hear.

"Suzanne!"

She was pouring out medicine now, and answered without turning.

"Yes, Michael?" Her voice was a little strange, but she held up the graduated medicine glass steadily, but made quite sure that she had poured out the right quantity.

"What's the matter with you, Suzanne?"

"Oh, nothing."

But her shoulders were rising and falling, as shoulders rise and fall when a man or woman

What Every Woman Forgets

wrestles with a turmoil of feelings that affect heart and breath.

"Suzanne, what is it? Morland—Morland is—"

She turned.

"Your medicine, Michael."

"Mr. Morland is an old—"

Then her eyes flamed, and her hand tightened quivering on the glass she carried. She had not divined all; but she had divined enough. The clumsy lies, the sudden uprising in the bed, the stare of a man who believed himself to have been found out had flung a light on the telephone conversation.

"Michael—"

But she stayed an outburst in the pause that followed. When she went on there was a note of desperate, tragic weariness in her voice.

"Don't make matters worse, more painful, Michael, by lying!"

She held out the medicine glass. He might have ceased to be her husband, and become a patient, who was to be pitied and nursed and cared for, not for any particular personal reasons, but in the name of humanity.

"Lying?"

He brought up his head, and it looked for a moment as if he meant to bluster, go on lying, and try to brazen it out. But he seemed to quail before the dignity and the masked reproach of the silent, slender womanly figure of his wife.

"Sir John was very emphatic on the subject of the medicine being taken regularly," she said. "He also prescribed quiet. I've got an evening paper. I'm going to read to you!"

He took the glass silently, meekly, for all his bulk and bigness somehow suggesting a comparison with a chastened child, and emptied it.

"Muck!" he muttered, weakly, like a man trying to relieve his feelings by a joke, however feeble. "But as long as it does me good!"

She took the glass from him and put it on the table. He followed her movements, an almost timid expression in his eyes. It was quite light outside, but the room was partially darkened. She crossed to one of the windows and altered the curtain and blind before she sat herself down and mechanically opened out the evening paper.

Luck would have it so.

The first thing her strained eyes lit upon was a little paragraph, a practical reiteration of what she had read in the morning paper. Mr. "Fritz" Kavanagh had been made one of the Prime Minister's private secretaries.

The print blurred. The room faded. She seemed to hear the thrash and throb of a screw and the slush of a foaming wake—

But only for a moment.

Two wrongs did not make one right.

She leant forward a little so that the light might better illuminate the print that was becoming clear again.

"Bunter-street murder," she read out, and then added, "That's what you want, isn't it, Michael?"

There was no reply from the bed.

Cloan was staring up at the ceiling. Suzanne rose anxiously. Her movement attracted his attention.

"What?" he asked. She repeated her question. "Yes. That's it. The Bunter-street mystery," he said mechanically, and stared again at the ceiling. His interest in the crime seemed dead.

Suzanne began to read. Some space was given up to a resume of the case, and further space to a description of the crowd outside the coroner's court and the disappointment of the majority, for whom there was no accommodation in court.

Cloan stirred, betraying some returning interest. He was direct himself, and this was rignarole. He hated rignarole.

And yet he was only interested in a subordinate way.

That second honeymoon seemed more remote than ever.

18 HURT IN TRAMWAY SMASH.

Eighteen people were injured, six seriously, in a tramway accident at Rochdale, Lancashire, on Saturday night. While going down the steep gradient in John-street a driver lost control of his car, probably because of the slippery state of the rails caused by the rain.

Dashing down the street, the car ran into an electric light standard, and then swerved across the road into the doorway of a shop, where it was wrecked. The driver bravely remained at his post, and was extricated from the wreckage in a terribly injured condition.

MOTHER! GIVE CROSS, SICK CHILD "CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS."

If Fretful, Feverish, Constipated,
Bilious or Tongue Coated,
Give This Delicious
"Fruit Laxative"
at Once.

A laxative to-day saves a bilious child to-morrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste: then the liver grows sluggish, and the stomach is disordered.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, with tainted breath, restless, doesn't eat heartily, or has a cold, sore throat, or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is a perfectly harmless dose, and in a few hours all this constipation-poison, sour bile and fermenting waste matter will gently move out of the bowels, and you will have a healthy, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftentimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrup. Ask your Chemist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse substitutes. "California Syrup of Figs" is sold by all leading chemists, 1s. 13d. and 1s. 9d.

PERFECT mean good health enhanced appearance

Go to Williams' to-day There are NO high prices.

The day of high prices for dental work is done; for anyone can go to any of the palatial Williams' Dental Surgeries, and there, without delay, have their defective teeth made sound at prices which all can afford.

If your teeth are in any way defective, go to Williams' to-day and ask for the free advice which is at all times readily given, without pressure to have work done.

Broken, missing, or discoloured teeth are a handicap in every affair of life.

They are a menace to health, upsetting the digestion, and thus harming the whole system.

In business, in social life, in public life, where good looks count to a great extent, defective teeth are a serious barrier to advancement.

If your teeth are defective you are not getting all the happiness that life holds out.

You are not getting your rightful share of health, pleasure, or success.

Make up your mind to remove the handicap which is placed upon you by having your teeth made sound, and pearly-white artificial "true-to-Nature" teeth fitted. It will not cost you much money, because the prices charged at Williams' Surgeries are so reasonable.

They are fighting a great fight against high prices, and are winning a great victory. Compare the scales of charges in the next column.

NO NEED TO WEAR TRUSSES

BE COMPLETELY CURED AND TRUSS FREE.
£100 OFFER.

CRIMEAN WAR VETERAN. 81 YEARS OLD.
Mr. R. BODGER, Maiden Down, Wellington, Somerset.

Mr. Bodger writes:—"I am now in my eighty-first year, and feel it a duty for the sake of Rupture sufferers, to inform you and them of my wonderful cure, through following your Home Cure Plan."

"I was Ruptured a great many years, and suffered very much, my Rupture coming down a fearful size. Now, thanks to you, I do not require to wear a Truss."

Mr. Bodger's case is but one of the many hundreds in the British Isles who have been cured by following the Collings Home Plan. What I say "cure," I mean exactly what I say.

Capt. Collings suffered from two very bad Ruptures, which doctors could not cure. He originated the Collings Plan and quickly cured himself. Since his cure he has given to the world at large the benefit of his experiments and experience.

It is not a fake appliance, spring Truss, nor operation. Appliances and Trusses are merely mechanical devices and alone are unable to give to Nature the assistance required to strengthen the muscles and effect a cure of Rupture.

The Collings Plan is a unique, reliable, and painless Home Means whereby even such cases as those which have been unsuccessfully operated upon may be quickly restored to natural strength.

Complete information of how to effect a cure at home, as Mr. Bodger did, and a full Test will gladly be sent free to all Ruptured people who write for it. Do not be unwise and run into danger by wearing unreliable Trusses, as you only incur disappointment and make your Rupture worse, but fill in the Coupon at the foot of this announcement and post it at once. The Free particulars of How to Cure Yourself quickly at Home, together with the £100 offer and a full Test will reach you promptly.

FREE HOME TEST COUPON.

Capt. W. A. COLLINGS AND SONS (Box 24 B1),
32, Theobald's Road, London, W.C.

BANNER BEARERS' FIGHT WITH WIND.

The Trade Unionists who demonstrated in Hyde Park yesterday had much to contend against before the procession reached its destination. The small picture shows a banner-bearer's battle with the wind and one of the emblems, which was blown to shreds.—(Daily Mirror photographs.)

VILLAGERS MOVE TEN-TON BUILDING.

The building drawn by a traction-engine down the main street.

The minister and workers enjoy hot coffee in the early morning.

The Leyland Wesleys, who set themselves the formidable task of moving a ten-ton building across the village, have completed their work. The traction-engine was only employed during the later stages.—(Francis Fielding.)

IRELAND WIN THE "SOCCER" INTERNATIONAL: SENSATIONAL COLLAPSE OF ENGLAND.

Ireland bother the English backs.

Shea, the English forward, tricks Hamill and O'Connell, the Irish half-backs.

McKee (Ireland) after fisting away.

Though Ireland lost the Rugby international at Twickenham, the positions were reversed in the "Soccer" match at Middlesbrough, where England went down by 3 goals to nil. Ireland showed much better combination, and thoroughly deserved their victory over a strong English eleven.—(Daily Mirror and Sport and General.)
